I just posted my story in the "introduce yourself" forum. It feels like a weight off my shoulders already, but I hope I can really do this.

I already woke up this morning with the YH in my head, but I managed to brush it off and go

The path to tahara is loaded with bumps in the road.

Guess my tiger and I weren't payin' enough attention (or too much attention to the ladies on the side) and the wagon went flying out to the ravine.

But the path does not begin from scratch.

Or does it?

Not really worth thinking about, honestly.

This second, I am clean.

What tomorrow brings, who knows?

Who cares?

Does tomorrow matter any more than yesterday?

Does yesterday matter at all?

All interesting points to ponder. At a different time.

When I can afford the luxury of pondering, instead of only doing.

That day may never come, but that is irrelevant.

Right now is what's relevant.

Am I even clean right now? Or merely white-knuckling?

Would I recognize the difference if it hit me in the face like a slushy snowball?

With these thoughts and others mixed like a slimy dinner into his brain, our hero valiantly tries to push them aside as he begins his journey once more...

Right..Left...Right...Left...

may be after heating up that jungle, shining loads of sun on it, warming it, drying it out completely, then after a long period of dryness, maybe maybe, we can ignite it, and get rid of the whole mess at once!

Today marks 9 months since my first post, the gestation period of a human being.

As such, I feel it appropriate to reflect a bit.

When a we are born, we are in no way finished growing or developing. We are just given certain abilities and tools that we must spend the next several years honing and fine tuning.

In similar fashion, I do not feel I am close to any type of permanent resolution of my issues. However, over the last 9 months, I feel I have been granted many gifts. Most important among them are the multitudes of friends I have formed relationships with through this site, who continue to advise me, listen to me, guide me, and sometimes just schmooze with me every day. I have also come to many stark realizations about myself and my thought process, specifically regarding lust, honesty, and other things.

I "hope" to continue using these gifts to progress forward in my life.
