Ok here goes,

Purim 2020: Joined GYE and started working on self for pornography, SSA thoughts and masturbation, didn't really get serious till Pesach

Pesach 2020: Started pushing myself to break free, saw major success and pulled through for 3 weeks when I felt I could only do a few days

May 2020: Started 90 day challenge. SSA stopped being a constant lust a whole day although still apparent (SSA partially attributed to high lust and a small lack of happiness with relationships) stopped feeling tired a whole day, no longer felt weak all the time, physically changed a lot for the better. (Thread from here till August: <https://guardyoureyes.com/forum/4-On-the-Way-to-90-Days/349216-Going-to-do-this> )

June 2020: Learning improved drastically when previously wasn't able to learn even for 5 minutes. Improved to nearly over an hour of steady concentration.

July 2020: All of the above mentioned changes continued and pornography/masturbation remained at zero use (all while I was going through a rough period for three weeks which was amazing considering I was depressed and normally I would act out as a result). Eventually gave in to my depression and fell at 78 days. SSA fell a lot more but the most tempting material in my head still remained.

August 2020: 90 Day challenge restarted more focused on masturbation where previously it was focused on pornography (Kept off both, just more emphasis placed on pornography). Fell once in the month. SSA has gone away. That's two goals (SSA and P) knocked out of the park.

September 2020: Lots of success but lack of words right now, updating a different time.

Sometimes a new perspective can change a person too. I'm sure you've read through the handbook but if you haven't already then now is the time.

Another essay to read is The Secret of Happiness written by Harav Guard (I think, and the handbook as well btw) that will change your perspective.

Read it and get back to me, it's not that long and it's linked so no excuses.

You can also read The Battle of the Generation but that's a whole book so if you like reading then great, if not start with the essay.

Day 2-7: clean

Day 8: fell

Question: why is quitting this so difficult for me? I usually ace everything I put my head to in life so why is this so hard?

You know - I have the same exact question.

I fell again yesterday too. And I don't get why I keep on doing it. But for me personally, I think the answer is that I truly believe I will stop when I need to. Like, when I will start dating, or when I get married or whenever in the future it is, I will just stop with this nonsense. Its not that I feel marriage will cure me, rather as soon as I need to get my act together, I will. Be it marriage, or work, or whatever else will just get me to let go. I never see myself doing this for the rest of my life, struggling for the rest of my life. I just don't need to stop right yet.

Stupid I know. I'll have to work on it. And you'll have to find your own reason. Think about it. Let us know.

Oish! ITK my brother! You know better than that!

This needs a longer response...I just don't have the time right now. Anyone?

ITK, with your permission, I offer the following thoughts. I don't mean this as telling you what to do. This is not the place for that and it's not what I like doing. It's just that it seems that you are looking for a solution to this trick of the yetzer hora and that you want to hear how others have fought this. So that's why I write this. If that's not so, please disregard this message.

Like 15 years ago I was in a store and I heard a person telling his friend, "I'm not addicted to cigarettes! I could quit whenever I want! I just don't want to right now."

I would bet anything that this person still smokes.

The question you have to ask yourself is when do you want to be that person who you want to be? Because if you don't decide that you want to be that person soon, you might tell yourself "tomorrow" for the rest of your life! But if you try now, then you will already be the person you want to be now!

There are things that are more important and greater to you than temptation, at least during the time of your life that you're not lusting. You have to ask yourself who you want to be. Do you want to be someone great? Then fight the battle and you'll be great (no matter whether you succeed or not).

When you want to win strong enough, you won't want to make excuses! You'll want to be the great person you can be, more than you want pleasures, and it will be easier not to make excuses.

Remember, the way to become a great person is by trying to overcome temptation. So when it's more difficult, it's a greater opportunity to become great!

C'mon, smash this yetzer hora. You got this! We're rooting for you!

Give yourself a kick in the pants buddy. If you can stop, stop now. Immediately. Face it, you will start dating and then the nusach will be - "I can stop, and i will when this gets serious". Then it will get serious and the nusach will be "I can stop, and i will when i get engaged". Then you will get engaged, and the nusach will be "I can stop, and i will when i get married....."

If you need help stopping or incentives, there are guys that help. You can PM to find out details.

@ITK My two cents: I think there is truth to people changing when they need to. However, I think some people find that what they thought would require them to change doesn't actually end having that effect. For example, turns out you can be dating or married and still struggle with this.

Of course, for some people, certain situations like dating and marriage can offer additional incentives to fight. That's great. For other people dating is actually a massive trigger. Especially dealing with the rejection and disappointment aspect involved. Or really liking someone and fantasizing etc. Point is, if we anticipate we will be in situations in the future that will act as additional motivators, that's great. But if we wait until then to change, we may be mistaken about how much a motivator those events actually are. It also will likely be even harder to change, because our habit has become more ingrained by indulging. Hope that is useful!

Day 1-12 Clean followed by a fall.

Days in and out:

I had days where I felt like I didn't want to get out of bed to go through the motions and yet I pushed myself.

I had days where I felt like I couldn't daven and yet I pushed myself.

I had days where I felt like I couldn't learn and yet I pushed myself.

I've known that sitting around on Shabbos doesn't bode well for me as I usually end up slipping and falling. So I went and took a nap, I woke up feeling groggy and nauseous. And throughout Motzai Shabbos although physically I felt disgusted, I felt good mentally as I had gone through Shabbos without falling.

It all happened so quickly. As I was laying in bed to go to sleep. I inadvertently irritated myself, this was followed by a thought, a disgusting thought that I thought I had left at the bottom of the pit I had crawled out of. And I fell. No further irritation, no further thinking. It happened so quickly.

I cried myself to sleep that night. Why? Why me? I had been a good kid. My mind had remained clean even after I found out about sex. And all it took was an abusive rebbe and the allure of a materialistic life, to shatter my self esteem into a million pieces.

Why? On which day I had I not pushed hard enough? To which person had I not been nice enough? To deserve this? Why?

I wish I knew the answer....

Here's to 90 days

Hatzlacha Rabbah and thank you in advance for taking the time to read this post.

Hey buddy, be strong, I feel for you, it sounds rough.

I still cry myself to sleep sometimes, not out of prayer or trying to connect to Hashem (although I do try to talk to Him) but as a shattered person.

It's rough and it feels like an endless battle against ourselves, we just cant seem to get out of our own way.

Yup, the story of my life, the crying, the promises, the week or two or three and then back to the beginning of the cycle all over again.

I am davening for you that you should have the strength and knowledge to know what it is that you need to do next and to be able to do it.

I wish I could be of more help.

Keep pushing and don't forget, the most important thing is to never give up!

All the best,

Wilnevergiveup

Hey hero, cut it out. You think this nisayon is a punishment?! You think it's the bad guys get tested with this tormenting taivah?! No, it is the heroes like you who Hashem for some hidden reason has chosen to rise to the challenge and stubbornly pick up after a fall (again) and keep trudging forward through the murky swamp. All those tears, all those promises, all those sick to the stomach feelings, all that agonizing pain is bringing Moshiach. And buddy, you will be on the front line.
