

Is there a way to edit my past streaks?

Posted by Hy - 28 Jan 2021 18:07

I'm not sure what happened but it says I had a very long streak that never happened.... It says 200 something days was my longest streak. Is there a way to edit that?

Probably some bugs in the system. My profile said I was divorced. Thankfully I am not divorced.

Ha! I also saw someone was divorced and I felt so bad for him...until a few weeks later he posted something about his wife of many years...

There actually is a way to edit past streaks and make them longer. That's by trying hard and being sincere with Hashem that we want to be strong. (This is otherwise known as teshuva.) We might win some and lose some, but Hashem knows how to make the right "adjustments"!

No doubt there are many people here who will have to get therapy when they get up to shomayim, because they will have trouble living with the reality of how great they are considered there. They might need some help getting comfortable with it and realizing how true it is and how great they are.

(You might notice that I'm having my own issues with the app by the way, lol.)
